Festival invites residents to 'Discover Placentia'

By Pamela Krebs North County News

Although most family outings can be a costly affair, the 28th Annual Heritage Festival and Parade this weekend is one way to-have some fun on the cheap. And, it's Placentia's biggest event of the year.

"It's a great weekend of family entertainment. Just about everything is free, which makes it the perfect event," said Liz Spring, Heritage Committee spokeswoman.

This year's theme, "Discover Placentia," celebrates the 500th anniversary of Columbus' arrival in America. The theme is incorporated down to the local level.

The event is divided into two parts: the festival and parade on Saturday at Kraemer Park, 201 N. Bradford Ave. and Bradford Park, 136 E. Palm Circle and the Harvest Hoe-Down on Sunday at Kraemer Park.

About 10,000 people are expected to attend, Spring said.

Council awards raises

Contracts called for increases

By Pamela Krebs North County News

City Council members voted 5-0 Tuesday to increase the pay of police officers and other city employees and to change their work schedules.

The salary increases are the third-year provisions of multiyear negotiated contracts. The increases will cost the city $151,000 for the 1992-93 fiscal year.

The Placentia City Employees Association represents 74 city employees ranging from office clerks to janitors. They will receive a 3.7 percent increase effective Sept. 27.

Thirty-six patrol officers represented by the Placentia Police Association will receive 3.8 percent salary increases. Fourteen sergeants, lieutenants and captains, who are represented by the Placentia Police Management Association, will receive raises ranging from 4.1 percent to 4.5 percent.

"We're under a contract with them and had agreements with the bargaining units," City Administrator Bob D'Amato said.

In addition to salary increases, contracts call for new work schedules on a trial basis. The schedules are effective Jan. 1.

City employees will work nine hours per day one week, followed by three nine-hour days and an eight-hour day the next week.

The schedule change will allow City Hall to increase the hours it is open to the public. The new hours will be 7:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Patrolmen will work three 12hour days. The new schedule is expected to increase the manpower on the streets.

Detectives and special details will work a 10 hours per day, four days a week.

"We anticipate it should cut down on overtime and increase productivity," D'Amato said.

Mead: Government needs to listen

By Pamela Krebs North County News

Betty Mead wants a lean government that listens to the needs of its

She wants to "keep the cost of government as low as possible and still provide the needed services."

Mead, 73, a communications operator and journalist, believes $26 million budget to operate a 6.7square-mile city is too costly and Placentia residents can't afford it.

'The government is to be the servant not the dictator," she said.

If elected, Mead said she wants to attract new business to the city and would use the Placentia Chamber of Commerce as part of her

'I think it's time we should be able to shop inside our borders for convenience and economics," Mead said.

In addition, the city should have a theater and bowling alley. The only recreation available in Placentia are the parks and historic homes which she helped to pre-serve, she said. She also wants a cemetery in the city.

Mead also wants new traffic signals and the synchronization of existing ones to help traffic flow

She also beleives the city needs more affordable housing.

Mead already served on the council from 1978-1981. She takes credit for decreasing the utility tax from 5 percent to 3 percent and eliminating the truth oath affidavit that residents had to sign before speaking at council meetings.

She also voted to rearrange the council agenda so the public did not have to wait until the end of the meeting to speak.

Her term ended when she was recalled after the council voted to fire the city manager. There were no formal charges against her, she

She founded Placentia Lend-A-Hand, a charity that gives aid to low-income families. She is a member of the Placentia Founders Society and she is the only Placentia recipient of the Humanitarian Award of the Year.

Newton: Experience provides insight

By Pamela Krebs North County News

City Councilman Arthur Newton said his experience in civic matters and extensive financial background are what Placentia needs to maintain sound management.

Newton, 42, is seeking his third consecutive term. He has served on the council since 1984 and has lived in Placentia for 15 years.

Newton is an accountant for Phoenix Group in Orange and has been a reserve officer for the Costa Mesa Police Department for 10 years.

Newton has a bachelor's degree in accounting from California State University, Fullerton.

He is studying tax law at Western State University in Fullerton and said he is one of 150 non-attorneys in the United States who is permitted to practice law before the U.S. Tax Court.

In his eight years on the council he said he has made his presence

'For a city this size we have one of the highest bond ratings in the state," Newton said. "I have something to do with that."

He believes his influence has helped the council operate more professionally.

If elected he will direct the Redevelopment Agency to actively seek viable businesses and new developments to enhance the sales tax

He wants to attract new businesses and provide a high level of city services.

Alcohol stings return

Investigators return to field

By Vik Jolly North County News

Alcoholic Beverage Control investigators soon may return to the field to address public complaints of illegal liquor sales and to enforce the law.

Gov. Pete Wilson recently signed legislation that will make the ABC a self-funded agency, restoring $23 million to its budget for fiscal 1992-

The bill also will bring relief to local police agencies — many of whom don't have the funds to allocate more investigators -- in enforcing liquor sale regulations.

Alcoholic Beverage Control investigators had been ordered not to conduct any field operations since March, when about $4 million — 23 percent — of the agency's budget was withheld as part of state spending cuts

Agencies funded with the state's general fund money, such as the ABC, were the hardest hit.

Fearing job losses, nearly half of the ABC investigators sought other jobs or transfers and those remaining were pulled out of the field to handle office duties such as issuing liquor licenses.

Half of the ABC's 14 Orange County investigators left their jobs and nearly 350 enforcement complaints haven't been investigated, said Marianne Eckhoff, the supervising investigator of the ABC's Santa Ana office.

Since March, investigators have struggled to keep up with the work-load by working Saturdays, at home and bringing in their own computer equipment to an ill-equipped office, she said.

Appointments for new and transfer of liquor licenses are scheduled well into January, Eckhoff said.

"Hopefully, we'll be allowed out," she said adding that she receives calls from parents and others from all over the county complaining about sales of alcohol to minors. "Bottom line is what's more important: public safety or issuing licenses?

Janet Cater, executive director of Mother's Against Drunk Driving's Orange County Chapter, said although ABC investigators will be out in the field it may not be soon

'It takes two to three years to train an officer to be fully functional in the field," she said.

In 1964, the Placentia Jaycees, a community service club, started the parade under the direction of former Jaycees President Frank Freeman who conceived the idea.

It was solely a Jaycees event with no outside funding or city involvement

For the first two years, the highlighted event was the elephant races. Students from California State University, Fullerton and from as far away as Harvard University participated in the race.

By that time, the Placentia Chamber of Commerce pancake breakfast already was in progress. The Jaycees thought it would be a good kick-off event for the festival and parade, so it was incorporated.

ALCOHOL: Investigators to probe illegal sales of liquor

With more than 5,000 liquor licenses in the county, "we were ex-tremely concerned that there was not a single (ABC) officer out in the field doing enforcement.'

While her group is pleased about that change, Cater said the risk to underage drinkers continues. She said MADD has always felt enforcement to be more important than licensing.

"We're just disappointed that the whole process couldn't be handled in a way that the state wasn't without trained officers and will be without trained officers for a long period of time," Cater said. Jerry Jolly, the deputy division chief of the ABC's Southern California Division, said many of the investigators who transferred to other departments will return to ABC and they should be back out in the field early next year.

"We feel that we need to get out people out as soon as possible," he said. "Local law enforcement resources are slim and a lot of the time the alcohol-related violations are the first to go. There's certainly a public safety issue.

The newly restored funding should give Orange County three more investigators and three licensing representatives.

Meanwhile, local police agencies have had to beef up their efforts to monitor compliance with liquor laws. Some police departments, such as Anaheim and Brea, increased decoy or sting operations to curb the sale of liquor to minors and curb other violations, such as selling to intoxicted people.

Police chiefs have expressed concerns about not having "anybody to pick up the slack and that they don't have the expertise to pick up the ABC violations," Eckhoff said.

"Most of the work is undercover. Police departments are more reactive than proactive. We'll go watch the store and would catch the kids before they had the alcohol and put the store on notice," she said. "We would work locations to see if they were selling to drunks and if narcotics were being sold. I don't know who is working this. Licensees understand when we are out there. There is a sense of 'be careful because ABC is watching.'

The Anaheim Police Department now is averaging a decoy operation a month, compared to one every two months prior to restrictions on ABC's investigators, officials said. Using one or more teen-age decoys to buy alcohol, police crack down on businesses selling to minors.

Sgt. Harold Mittmann, who heads the vice detail, said his investigators could use a hand from ABC in monitoring liquor sale out-

"Until they get all of their people back they are still not going to be able to complement our efforts in the way they did prior to the cutbacks," he said.

Increased ABC staff will first try to catch up on the backlog of licensing requests and later turn its attention to enforcement, said Robert Pipkin, a spokesman for the Business, Transportation and Housing Agency, which oversees

Caltrans takes message to schools

By Tenny Tatusian North County News

Just like any other prevention program, Caltrans workers are showing up in high school driver's education classes warning first-time drivers of the risks construction workers face daily.

"We have all kinds of employees killed and maimed," Caltrans Superintendent Robert Bavier told a class of 10th-graders at Esperanza High School.

Five workers have been killed in the last 6 months, he said. In the past 10 years, 50 workers have died on the job.

Bavier also warned students about keeping up with car maintenance needs.

"If your car is in bad repair, you're risking your life and our lives," he said.

The presentation is one of six that Caltrans workers will be making to students.

They will be at Country Hills Elementary School in Brea Oct. 19 and in Orange at Orange High School Oct. 22.

nesses while protecting the integrity of residential areas.

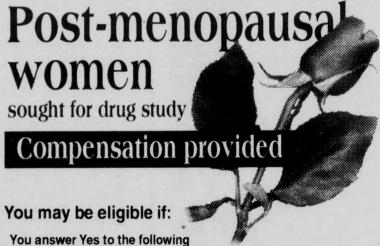

Not only does she want to attract new businesses, she said the city's older shopping centers should be upgraded

Her perfect attendance record at City Council meetings and lack of affiliation with special interest groups sets her apart from other council members, she said.

"As a lifelong resident, I'm deeply committed to improving and maintaining the quality of life in our city," Moreno said.

A second term would allow her to improve services and generate revenues in the city, she said. She believes redevelopment money should be used to refurbish small businesses and all contracts for professional services should go out to bid.

If elected, she said she would push for a Placentia stop for the proposed regional commuter rail system to reduce smog and generate revenue.

Boys douse stove fire

Action prevents flames from spreading to house

By Anne M. Peterson North County News

With the snap of a finger, the small, stove-top fire could have raged uncontrolled in the Anaheim neighborhood where families often do yard work together and children play in the streets.

If not for the courage of three boys, the house would have been lost, fire officials said.

When 13-year-old Casey Carlson saw flames shooting from his friend Anthony Quang's kitchen last week, he didn't have time to panic or call the fire department.

Instead, he grabbed the garden hose, dashed in the house and with the help of Ryan Wade, 13, and Quang, 12, doused the flames.

The boys were talking outside when Carlson noticed the flames, which erupted when a pan of frying chicken was left unattended on the

'We were standing with all our friends," Carlson said. "I didn't think it was nothing big. Every body was standing and looking and I just ran in there."

While Carlson and Wade attacked the fire through the front door, Quang ran around the back of the house and used the backyard hose to help attack the flames.

"I knew I had to do something or you wouldn't see the house now, Carlson said

Carlson and Quang, Kraemer Junior High seventh-graders, said information they learned in a junior firefighter class in sixth grade helped them remember how to snuff the flames.

The boys had the fire completely extinguished by the time firefighters arrived.

Quang said the fear of getting hurt was far from his mind

"If I would've waited, it would have spread," he said. "I just thought about putting out the fire." Carlson's father, Darryl, said he was in the shower when the fire broke and didn't realize what his son had done until he got out.

'They were real humble about it," Darryl Carlson said.

SCOUTING

He's flying to an Eagle by feeding the hungry

The way to a man's heart is through his stomach." Taking paraphasing license to the cliche, one might say that Boy Scout Matt Ironroad's way to an Eagle Scout Award might be found in the hunger of oth-

He's carrying a heavy load on his path to the Eagle rank two tons of load. That's the total weight of the food-drive goal he has set for himself and the needy

The project is geared to en-hancing Ironroad's standing in the Boy Scout community. But that's not as important to the Scout as the knowledge that others will be helped by his effort. "I like it (the project) because I know I'm going to be helping people (in need)," he Ironroad learned of the project when a minister at his church told him the Placentia Human Services Department has an ongoing need for large quantities of food. The 13-yearold eighth grader at Tuffree Junior High School knew it was going to be a Herculean task. It would be more than a one-boy show. Some organization would be needed.

One of the first needs, he realized, was bags to pack supplies. So he solicited the help of neighboring supermarkets. He also knew transportation was vital, if his project was to be successful. So, he enlisted the help of neighborhood mothers to deliver the goods he collected to the Human Services Department.

The meat of the project is being handled by Ironroad. He is collecting and packaging the foodstuffs, which include raw wheat and canned goods. Knowing that one private individual is working to make a difference in the lives of others inflicted with misfortune, gives us hope for a society that is increasingly becoming philanthropized by government.

If we are to return to a society unsupported by govern-ment edict, where individuals help others voluntarily because it's the thing to do, then we must all become an Ironroad in our thoughts and our deeds.

In commenting on his project, Ironroad said, "It makes me feel good." We feel pretty good about it too, Matt.

Brea is power-brokering away the past

By Don J. Clever Editorial and commentary director

To help celebrate the 75th anniversary of incorporation, Brea City Council directed staff to work with all segments of the community to recognize the city's past. It's incredible that the power brokers seek recognition of the city's early days while they're razing much of that history in the Brea Boulevard redevelopment area. The project is costing the city one of the last links to its own history. Does anybody

As predicted, candidates for public office in Yorba Linda are thumbing their noses at the citizens they hope to represent on the City Council and school board. Their "We don't care, we need to get our names out to the public attitude is trashing Yorba Linda Boulevard with campaign signs. It started with one or two candidates. Now most of the candidates are participating. We were told by two of the guilty parties that they're doing nothing illegal. Are these candidates familiar with a moral code against such acts of "garbaging up" public rights-of-way? Again, I encourge to voters in November to cast their ballots for any candidate who refuses to join these neighborhood trashers.

For you late-nighters in Anaheim be prepared for some traffic entanglements while work is under way to resurface parts of Beach Boulevard between Lincoln Boulevard and the I-5 Freeway. The southbound lanes of Beach Boulevard will be fully closed except for emergencies between 9 p.m. and 6 a.m. Hopefully, detours will be adequately marked (many times bureaucrats aren't quite sure how to resonably communicate alternate

CLEVER COMMENTS

GENEROSITY

Now is time to return trust to Brea Foundation

By Don J. Clever

Editorial and commentary director

God helps those who help themselves. Remember those words of wisdom?

America is great because it helps others. It's great because it is made up of people from all corners of the world. It's a great country because Americans are externely

Results of a recent study show Americans donated 82 percent of all the charitable giving to world causes. Americans gave $182 billion to charity in 1989. In 1990 and '91, despite economic hard times, Americans continued to give up to six percent of their income to charitable causes.

The vast majority of this giving came from individuals. Corporate donations amounted to about 7 1/2 percent of the total contributed to charity in recent years. Simply put, Americans are opening their hearts and pocketbooks so others can benefit.

It's happening in Brea. The Lions Club in that city is currently conducting a campaign to raise $1 million for a new Boy Scout and Girl Scout Center. More than 1,500 young people are involved in Brea scouting. That represents about 4 ½ percent of Brea's population. Add the charitable works of the Kiwnians, Rotarians, the American Legion, the VFW and the Brea Veterans Club and we have a whole lot of giving going on in the city.

A relatively new group in Brea should be included among the city's philanthropists. We refer to the Brea Foundation. The Foundation was formed more than a decade ago to serve as a conduit for non-profit groups who wanted to contribute to the betterment of the city. Corporations got involved. Private individuals got involved. Originally the Foundation was to be a private organization, free of political and bureaucratic influence.

But politicians and bureaucrats got involved and began running the show. These public officials set the agenda for the Foundation. The Foundation in essence, ceased being a non-profit organization and became a political one under the umbrella of the City Council.

The Brea Foundation allowed to operate as it should could be a major asset to the city. If it could be run by individuals with desires to do something of worth for their community, by those who believe in goals and purpose and with a desire to serve, then the Foundation could function in the mode in which it was formed.

San Diego has a non-profit foundation run by corporate leaders. The California Foundation located in Los Angeles also is a private, non-profit group run by volunteers in the community. The Brea Foundation was once like that — until the city hall group got involved. It's been downhill since

If the Brea Foundation is to survive, and for the good of the city we hope it does, it must be perceived as being free of domination by the City Council, its agencies and other bureaucrats at the city offices. It must be housed away from the influence of the powercrats. It must be operated and administered by a group of directors who feel free and unencumbered to speak their minds based on what's best for the community, not what is in the best interest of the self-serving city hall administrative crowd.

There was a time when the Foundation was revered and trusted. To a degree it still holds the trust of many, but its integrity has waned some since the ground rules were changed by government officials.

We urge the current directors to put on a stiff upper lip and tell these public officials to go fly a kite. They should also return their articles of corporation back to the way they once were. They should remove the political stigma now clouding the articles

The proper thing for the public officials who have stuck their collective political noses where they're unwanted, would be for them to resign. Are you listening, Mr. Wedin, Mr. Isles and Ms. Wicksted.?

A sluggish economy is causing delays in redevelopment projects in Fullerton. City officials are upset. Would it be that much of a cataosphre if redevelopent was abandoned by the city and placed back where it really belongs - the private sector.

Public schools throughout the state are grasping at straws in their battle with tight budgets.

Meanwhile, one private school, Fairmont in Anaheim, is adding 24 days to its school year as a way to slow the drain from its budget. By extending the school year from mid-June to July 30, the school is alleviating part of the typical costly three-month summer vacation, when the school functions with full staff and no students.

Anaheim's battle with an autoshredding firm may soon be over. The company is removing a small mountain of toxic waste to conform to the city's demands.

Kitchen band tunes into nostalgia nce a haven of silence, Placentia's original library is now buzzing with kazoos

Filling the former adult book section of the Bradford Avenue landmark, 12 amateur musicians are spending Monday mornings tooting tunes to the accompaniment of tambourines, maracas, a piano and a drum. With the toy whistles attached to decorated detergent bottles, players hum while Louise Hudson conducts

Edna Taxey, 84, said the group was organized 15 years ago by the Placentia Senior Citizens Club 'just to give us something entertaining to do." The band was called on to play for festivals, park gatherings, schools and convalescent homes

"There used to be 18 in the group, but due to illness and moves, we're down to 12," Fullerton's Taxey said. "We have a gut bucket and other instruments just waiting for players.'

"Most of us can't drive at night, so we carpool during the day to entertain at local schools and retirement homes," Hudson added. "Little kids love us."

Children of all ages are fascinated with Maria Spata's home-made "singing horn," a kazoo attached to a plastic automotive funnel. The lifelong Placentia resident has glued fringe balls to the bright red instrument, creating an ethnic flavor.

Betty Hakins of Yorba Linda, who changes the plastic flowers on her horn to match the seasons, said she prefers the polkas in the wide-ranging repertoire. Placentia's Margaret Escorza picked up the beat two years ago when the bandmaster assigned her to the drum.

We listened.

We talked to a group of seniors, and we asked them what they wanted.

Long Range ®DRYDAY forecast

ia-ses nie

The planning graph below is a forecast of the daily probability of dry or rainy weather throughout the month. The "valleys" represent low risk of rain and are therefore the expected dry or fair periods. The "peaks," identified by a star and indicating a risky day, signify higher risk of wet weather and should be avoided when scheduling weather-sensitive activities. The heights of the various peaks indicate their percent of risk compared to one another, but just as none of them reach 100 percent, do not expect rain every time.

How to use the DRYDAY Forecast

- "DRYDAY" forecasts are designed to help you, finally, be able to plan your activities weeks ahead without someone changing the forecast.
- 2. You must watch the forecast each day. Therefore, cut the forecast out of this publication and post it conveniently, like on the refrigerator door or on a bulletin board at home or at the office.
- 3. After a while you will notice that most rainy days occur on risky days and you will gradually gain confidence in planning your activities on the DRYDAYS.

The forecasts won't be perfect, but you will enjoy very favorable odds over the months and years. Remember "risky" days are not necessarily rainy days, but simply the days that have been calculated for this particular forecast situation over a long period of time, to be in a category which has demonstrated a higher probability for inclement weather.

Neither RUCH WEATHER SERVICES INC., nor the publisher, guarantees the accuracy of these forecasts and no liability shall devolve upon either. No reproduction without written authorization. COPYRIGHT 1992 RUCH WEATHER SERVICES INC. For information on ULTRA-LONG RANGE forecast, call (714) 633-9013.

FRIDAY

bus epic, "1492," opens today, and his futuristic thriller, "Blade Runner," is being re-released. Jim Emerson talks to this master of visual style.

All's Fair. Is "State Fair," the highly touted musical at the Long Beach Convention Center starring Seal Beach actress Susan Egan, worth seeing? Theater critic Tom O'Connor lets you know.

Royal release. Prince's new album - which has no title but is represented by an odd symbol — hits stores next week. Has the Purple One lost his mind or found his muse? Cary Darling reviews the new release.

TRAVEL: Undersea sanctuary It's deeper than the Canyon. Grand Bigger than Connecticut. A federally sanctioned preserve that's been hailed as California's most impressive environmental achievement since the creation of Yosemite National Park. But exploring the new Monterey Bay National Marine Sanctuary is a bit more complicated than lacing up the hiking boots and stuffing the fanny pack with a canteen and a good map.

High-tech reservations. When the airlines slashed prices 50 percent this summer, millions of people who already had tickets scrambled to cash in on a better deal — only to be placed on seemingly interminable hold by overwhelmed reservation agents. But travelers who'd booked their flights through some agencies didn't even need to pick up the phone. Armed with specialized, high-speed computer programs, these agencies are able to nab cut-rate bargains automatically.

ACCENT: Girls and gangs. One day, sisters Daisy and Yvonne Gallegos got into a brawl because they belonged to rival gangs. Things have died down since then; Yvonne has eased her involvement with her gang because she's pregnant. We profile two sisters who have paid the price for being in gangs.

SPORTS: Road to the World Series.

The American and National League Championship series continue with Toronto at Oakland and Atlanta at Pittsburgh. Consult Sunday's Register for the results.

SHOW: Bowers is back. The renovated Bowers Museum reopens Oct. 18 after being closed for three years. Laura Bleiberg and Kinney Littlefield give a tour of the new building and its collection.

Talk talk. The traditional conductor walks onstage, mounts a podium and wordlessly gives the downbeat to the orchestra. This long-held tradition is changing; the Pacific Symphony will now have music director Carl St. Clair speak informally to the audience. Classical critic Scott Duncan looks at this trend.

MONDAY Oct. 12

BusinessMonday: Major player. How Jeff Meyers has made it big as a real estate consultant. The Meyers Group is a leading data gatherer for the local industry and has done well through the recession.

At Work: In the 1980s it was Wall Street; in the 1970s, it was advertising. What are the hot jobs that attract the best and brightest in the '90s?

It's Your Business: Total Quality Management is the buzz phrase of the '90s, and even small companies are trying to implement it. South Coast Electric Supply of Irvine, which started implementing TQM about nine months ago, shows what it looks like in real life.

May we have many more years, filled with love and laughter

That will brighten our lives in the future hereafter.

From the Hacienda Mobile Park front porch: Happy anniversary to Bud and Helen Birdson and Bill and Mildred Ward

News from Tuffree Junior High: "Students, Parents, and Teachers ... United for a Better Future," is the theme for the Tuffree PTA 1992-93 school year. Leading the PTA way will be Don Craig, president, along with Laurie Adamson, first vice president; Delma Lucas, second vice president; Peggy Smith, secretary; Stacia Walson, treasurer; Ginny Hertzler, historian; Terry Yakuborsky, auditor and Sue Morrison, parliamentarian.

Another person who doesn't do a lot of front porch sitting ... She's just too darn busy! If "most dedicated" was a Placentia Hospital Guild award, Penny Fellows would carry home the trophy. She has been a guild member for more thanr 20 years currently chairs the hospital gift shop but has been involved with every committee and special project the guild has sponsored. Penny hails from Chattanooga, Tenn. but has lived in this area with husband, Ralph, for 29 years. Children include Susan Whitmore, Mark, and Steven, and three grandchildren, Erika, Chris-topher, and Kendra, who range in age from 1 to 22. Important things to Penny? Family, friends and good health. When not volunteering, Penny enjoys reading and handcrafts such as bead stringing, needlepoint and she occasionally Sitting out on the front porch waiting for them to come home for a visit could be: Marvin Kluthe, fa-ther of Navy Seaman Recruit Roger L. "Walk with me in the night; Walk with me in the star blue light; Walk with me in the Blue Light; Walk with me, for the words are the star, Shine in the night for my eyes, To shine to read and write, So don't be afraid to read and write, Shine like the star in the Blue Light." Jess placed third in the Basic Reading category in the writing competition. Congratulations to you!

Wedding bells rang for Julie Belloni and Bob McLaren, Aug. 22 at the Holiday Inn in Bullhead City, Ariz. The Rev. Crystle Pender officiated. The bride's parents are William and Jackie A. Wiesner of Corona and William Anthony Belloni of Barbara McLaran of Barstow. The newlyweds took a honeymoon trip to Laughlin, Nev.

Last but certainly not least: Congrats to David Riggins who was selected as Placentia Yorba Linda school bus driver of the month for September. And as for the rest of us out there, let's be especially careful while out driving our highways and neighborhood streets. There're a lot of children walking to and from school and it's up to us to be really alert because sometimes the young ones aren't!

Put Jennifer Storey Gillis "In a Pumpkin Shell" and her suggestions come out very well.

The 58-page book on harvest projects (Storey Communication: $8.95) details more than 20 pumpkin-related activities from planting a patch to cooking the fruits of labor.

A section on pumpkin lore tells the story of Jack of the Lantern's introduction to America by Irish immigrants. Gillis also shares there were once so many pumpkins in New England, the city of Boston was nicknamed 'Pumpkinshire.

Barry identified the red-leafed plant as Rhus diversiloba, commonly known as poison oak.

The vegetation, Barry explained, often invades fire-ravaged areas and oak woodlands, drawing attention to its droughttolerant popularity

"Unfortunately it can get out of hand, and some people, like my-self, find immunity to the plant doesn't necessarily last," Barry

Drought-tolerant, the botanical buzzword for the '90s, has drawn local support from members of the California Native Plant Society, Orange County chapter. Barry said the xeriscape movement, begun 10 years ago, was slow in acceptance after being affected by irrigation skeptics.

'People still have a misconception that all drought-tolerant plants are dry and dull in appearance, but just look at the azaleas at the Fullerton Arboretum," Barry said. "They only need water twice a month, and the blooms are beautiful.'

He also pointed to a shrub survey conducted at the UC Irvine South Coast Field Station where monitors discovered the vegetation needed considerably less water than expected.

Esperanza High School teacher Frank Zahn said October is a good time to plant California native varieties. A veteran hiker,

The drought-tolerant plants at the Fullerton Arboretum are very clearly labeled like this Cushion Bush plant on the slope next to the gift shop.

Zahn filled his Yorba Linda hill-side with dozens of drought-tolerant plants, designing small hiking trails for a leisurely stroll

This fall's bright red blooms offer as much beauty as the gray-green leaves during the dormant season," Zahn said.

'The neatest thing about our plant society is the field trip schedule; those are class acts," Zahn said. "It's like finding a

"People out here have that East Coast mindset of brilliant plants and sheets of color," said Celia Kutcher, curator/taxonomist at the Arboretum. "We need to remember this is a coastal plain of Southern California. Why pretend we live somewhere else?"

Walking through the 11-year-old Arboretum native plant garden on the Cal State Fullerton campus, Kutcher said fall plantings allow quicker growth due to summer's left-over warm soil. "When the air cools, there's not as much stress on the leaves," she said.

Kutcher explained there is a movement to shift from New England to California landscapes. California natives simply offer great pattern growth and subtle

The more popular varieties, she said, include California lilac and manzanita. Kutcher suggested following simple rules to plant natives: research the plant, analyze the site and soil, find out when the sun rises and sets and consider the slopes and angles.

"Those who live in north Orange County have clay soil, which is suitable for many plant types, Kutcher said.

Continuing her tour through the chapparal, Kutcher pointed to easy-care plants: Wooly Blue Curls, Buckwheat, Saltbush that grows on the Dana Point cliffs, Lemonade Berry prevalent at Santa Barbara Botanical Gardens and Toyon, a handsome shrub with berries and white flowers.

"When you have all this, why plant the ornamental varieties?"
Kucher questioned. "It's just a matter of training the eye to look at different shades of green and

Bomkamp, who serves as field trip leader with the 250-member Native Plant Society chapter, suggested tours are an easy way to discover beautiful drought-tolerant vegetation. Can't overemphasize importance of composting

By Lorra Almstedt For the North County News

It is hard to overemphasize the important role composting — the addition of organic matter — has in our gardens.

Compost improves the structure of the soil by giving it substance and making it a better home for plants. It helps control weeds by discouraging their sprouting and it makes the soil easier to work with. It also adds needed elements to the soil's chemistry and creates air spaces to allow water to reach the

Perhaps most important to Southern California, however, composting helps conserve water

THE GROWING CONNECTION

in three ways; it holds moisture in the soil, it slows evaporation from the surface, and allows more water to enter the soil because of the soft

To prove the value of compost, add one inch of compost to half of a planter bed and then work it into the soil. Then add another two inches to that half as a top dressing. Water and feed the entire planter in the same way and it won't be long before you can tell the difference between the two Adding compost as a mulch (top dressing) is only one way to use it. It is also valuable as an amendment when planting new plants.

Dig a hole twice as big as the plant's root ball. Blend an equal amount of compost and soil to fill in around the new plant.

Compost or organic material can be purchased in several forms at nurseries. There are bags of redwood compost, planting mix, peat moss and leaf mold — all useful. It can also be purchased by the cubic

But the best compost is homemade. Composting is easy and one of the most beneficial types of recycling.
The Recipe for Compost

A container for your compost is helpful but not necessary - an out of the way corner will work. Containers should allow air to circulate around the contents and it can be made of wire, hollow brick or wood. It can be permanent or moveable. One container will work or if you have a lot of clippings, use two or three, moving the contents as it decomposes.

Most of the ingredients can be found around the home. They include leaves, lawn clippings, prunings (large pieces can be used but they will take longer to break down), kitchen vegetative scraps (not table scraps), fertilizer.

Layer these materials starting with six to eight inches of the organic material. Add a thin layer of fertilizer - it doesn't matter what you use, any grandular formula. Because of its high salt content, most manure is not recommended. However, chicken and rabbit manure is a good choice. Nitrohumus can also be used

The ideal way to add the necessary amount of air is to turn the entire mixture every six weeks.

Want to know more about composting? Attend the 10:30 a.m. Nov. 7 Saturday Morning at the Fullerton Arboretum program on composting. The class meets under the ash tree. Saturday Morning programs are free and last about

Gas can provide ambiance

Imagine coming into a dark, chilly room after a long, hard day. You curl up on the couch, reach for the remote control, and, voila! - instant firelight a soothing sight and sensation of warmth without chopping, hauling or loading cordwood. Sound too good to Gas-burning logs, fireplace inserts and stoves combine the convenience and cost-effectiveness of heating with natural gas with the cozy appeal of a blazing hearth. At the touch of a button, flames difficult to distinguish from the real McCoy, dance among ceramic logs and glowing embers designed to fool even the most discerning devotee of wood heat.

If your home is among the majority of American homes with natural gas. these appliances let you update an inefficient, open fireplace or create an entirely new hearth, virtually anywhere in the home.

Central to all gas appliances are gas burner systems and logs made of refractory cement or ceramic. The appearance of a flickering, golden fire is created by reducing air enter-ing the firebox. Gas entering the fireplace is then diffused through sand, vermiculite or gravel for a natural iooking, irregular flame pattern. In some cases, an added blanket of rock-wool material is spread over the sand. This creates the look of glowing red and orange embers to enhance the illusion of burning wood.

The wood itself is ingeniously crafted for a "fresh off the woodpile" appearance. Most logs are molded from real wood, and ingrained with natural color throughout. Several species of wood molds are available, so if you're a stickler for detail, you can match the wood in your fireplace to what's available in your area. All logs feature the look of split firewood heaped atop a cheery blaze, including surface imperfections, bark, and even ax marks!

Roar of greasepaint beckons actress to stage

By Barbara Giasone North County News

Once dubbed "the great character actress of UCLA" by classmates and staff, Andrea Goldin-Frumes has been out of character for 16 years while raising a family.

A few audition rejections and several voice classes were the Yorba Linda housewife's only links to the theatrical world

17-year-old Charity Allen of La Habra has been chosen to sing with the Los Angeles Music Center Opera Friday night at the John Anson Ford Amphitheater in Hollywood.

Hitting high notes

Local actor debuts with L.A. Opera company

By Tim Dermody

Because she adores Broadway musicals and is simply crazy about pop stylists, Charity Allen thought opera singing might be a little out of her range.

But - because she loves performing even more — the 17-year-old La Habra resident disregarded the trepidation, swallowed her fears and stepped center stage for an audition with the Los Angeles Music Center Opera.

Choosing a piece from Andrew Lloyd Weber's popular, "The Phantom of the Opera," the high soprano performed masterfully, complimenting her vivaciousness and enthusiasm with an extended range and endearing vocal quality that impressed and enthralled the

The members of the audition committee were so captivated by her work that they selected Allen for the cast of Edward Barnes' "A Place to Call Home," a modern opera that will debut Friday at the John Anson Ford Amphitheater. The piece will be performed by four professional singers and 30 students — including Charity Allen — from the Los Angeles High School of the Arts. Curtain call is 8

"I started out singing gospel in church then moved on to pop music in my teens," Allen said recently. "Broadway musicals are my style and I just love Barbra Streisand. But I had also been trained in classical music so when I found out about the opera auditions, I decided to give it a shot.

"It was a difficult step for me because I had been doing pop stuff. But it wasn't much that much of a shock because it's a modern opera, a lot like a Broadway musical-theater piece.

Examining the plight of modernday immigrants, "A Place to Call Home" is based on Barnes' interviews with students who've to moved to Los Angeles from Mexi-co, Vietnam, El Salvador and Cambodia. In exploring the refugees' lives, the opera touches on the students' identities, traditions and lifestyles.

Performed originally March, Barnes enlarged the current production to include more participation from the students. who are serving as singers, dancers, musicians, chorus-members and understudies

"This piece will serve as an excellent introduction for young people to the world of opera," said Llewellyn Craig, the opera company's manager of education and community programs.

MARKET: People turn out for prices, selection

enue between Harbor Boulevard and Pomona Avenue each Thursday from 4 p.m. to 9 p.m., selling everything from kiwi fruit and fresh basil to tapestries and flowered picture frames

The farmers come from as far away as Fresno, Littlerock and Buttonwillow or as near as Yorba Linda, Orange, Placentia, Brea and Anaheim.

"It's really a lot of fun," said Dawn Manassero of Yorba Linda's Manassero Farms. "You get to work closely with the people buying your products and they get fresh produce and healthier lives. It's a lot more fun than working with shippers and brokers."

Turning east on Wilshire from Harbor, visitors are stopped by barricades and cones indicating something unusual up ahead. The jungle-gym and arts-and-crafts booths guard Wilshire, with fruit and vegetable sellers taking up the wide expanse north of the street.

Buyers pore over tables filled with ripe, colorful Kiwi fruits, Fuji apples, potatoes, carrots, garlic, corn on the cob, onions, grapes, tomatoes, sprouts, avocadoes, peaches, okra, plums, cucumbers, lettuce, grapefruit, peppers, beans and persimmons. Several growers

On the craft aisle, patrons choose from wood carvings, plant holders, murals, T-shirts, seashells, abalone cones, magnets, incense, bumper stickers, books, buttons, stuffed animals, puka necklaces, purses, rugs, baby wear and the ever-popular tie-dye and Guatemalan clothes.

Nobody is really sure what draws people to the Fullerton Market every Thursday: The prices are overshadowed only by the selection, which is superseded only by the quality by the quality.

"I like the top-quality produce and the prices are much better than you'd find in the stores," said

Fullerton electrician John Shannon.

"You'll find a lot of things here that you won't find in the stores. Plus, I run in to a lot of people that I know out here. To me, it's just one more thing Fullerton has going for it, one more thing it has to offer."

Open since last April, the Thursday Fullerton Market will continue to at least Dec. 17. At that point, officials will decide whether to extend it or break for the season.

Though fairly well attended, the Thursday Fullerton Market sometimes has trouble attracting sellers—especially when compared to the number that attends the Woodcrest Park market, now in its 11th year.

Part of the problem lies in a Fullerton ordinance that forbids large signs on city thoroughfares. "The biggest challenge is getting regular clients to fill the booths," Mottola said. "But the word has gotten out and more and more people are coming all the time."

Nonetheless, the sponsors believe that people will turn out provided they are given a good product.

"What's interesting is that you find a real cross-section of Orange County here," said market comanager Mona Amoon. "Something like this really brings people together."

right direction.

He settled on the "song title" category. The lyrics "I Belong to You" appeared in several dozen works, one of which was performed by the Love Unlimited Orchestra led by romantic baritone Barry White.

De La Garza snapped his fingers and moved on to the record and CD bins, another customer satisfied by technolgy and computer advancements.

"I see this thing here all the time, but there is always somebody around it so this is my first time using it," De La Garza said. "It's pretty cool. It can really help you find what you're looking for."

A Boon-e for Seattle

El Dorado grad shows promise in 'The Show'

By Marc S. Posner North County News

l Dorado High School's baseball field is nothing spectacular to the average spectator.

It's nestled in a quiet part of Placentia and has a small electronic scoreboard in center field. And if you hit a ball hard enough, you can land it on Brookhaven Avenue.

Many a player there has dug into the box with big dreams. That's the way a high school ballpark is supposed to be — full of dreams.

When Bret Boone first set foot on that diamond, he knew it was just one of many he'd encounter en route to the big leagues.

It's not that he was cocky. It's just that he was that good — and he knew it.

Varsity baseball coach Steve Gullotti knew it, too.

"Talent-wise he's probably the best pure hitter that I've ever coached," Gullotti said, recalling a great natural ability, tremendous hands, bat speed, and great handeye coordination.

"As an infielder I've never had anyone who had the hands he had," he said. "You could never see the ball touch the glove on ground balle"

Boone's father, former Angels catcher Bob Boone, knew before both of them.

"(I knew) probably when he was 2," said the elder Boone.

When Boone graduated in 1987, he headed to the University of Southern California, where he promptly broke Mark McGwire's RBI record. He also holds the school record for runs, doubles and triples. In three collegiate seasons, he didn't miss a game.

The minors brought accolades as well, including his selection to the first-ever Double-A All-Star Game, the Southern League All-Star squad and the Topps Double-A All-Star team.

But the big news around these parts is that Boone's made it to "the show," with the Seattle Mariners.

His newest task will be replacing one of the all-time favorite Mariners, Harold Reynolds, at second base. Reynolds owns three gold gloves and has made as many All-Star appearances.

ff Talent-wise, he's probably the best pure hitter that I've ever coached. As an infielder, I've never had anyone who had the hands he has. You could never see the ball touch the glove on ground balls.

Steve Gullotti El Dorado High baseball coach

But Boone was never worried about being stuck behind Reynolds, who now appears likely to opt for free agency.

"I don't feel trapped at all," he said before a spring training game against the Angels in Palm Springs in March. "I feel that when I feel I'm ready, it doesn't matter who's in front of me. It's just a matter of how soon they're willing to give me that shot. "(Reynolds) has been out here for the past four, five years and done a great job. But when when my time comes something's gonna happen and I'm gonna be there."

Dad didn't have his doubts either.

"I was excited," Bob Boone said, recalling his reaction to the news of Bret's promotion. "Naturally, it's something that I expected and it was just a matter time. I was excited. I know he was excited."

Bob Boone now manages the Tacoma Tigers, the Oakland Athletics' Triple-A affiliate and a rival of Bret's former Calgary team. Will he miss seeing his son around the league?

Not a chance.

"We're through with Calgary anyway," he said.

In typical Bret Boone fashion, he's already established a Major League first. And he did it when he first set foot on the field.

He, along with his father and grandfather, Ray Boone, an infielder from 1948-60, became the Majors' first three-generation family.

But both Bret and Bob say that's just part of a trivia question.

"I don't feel any pressure at all," Bret Boone said in March. "That, to me, is just made a big deal by the media. But it's not that big of a deal as far as I'm concerned." "Well, it's an interesting trivia question," Bob Boone said. "I'm happy because Bret made it, but I'm happy for him."

For Bret, what matters happens on the field.

And though he struggled at times in his brief stint in the bigs, batting .194 in 33 games with 34 strikeouts, other numbers showed the promise of stardom: 15 RBI (which projects to about 70 over a full season) and four home runs (18-20). Not bad for a middle infielder.

His first game came in a park that looks more like the type his grandfather played in — Oriole Park at Camden Yards.

And on that field of realized dreams, in his first at-bat, Bret Boone smashed his first base hit, collecting his first RBI.

Plus, his 129 Seattle at-bats allow him to retain his rookie status for 1993.

Marc S. Posner/North County News Bret Boone signs autographs before a spring training game at Palm Springs in March.

Tigers have regained winning formula

By Rusty Evans North County News

Despite the fact that Valencia lost 18 starters from the best team in his 11 years at the school, Coach Mike Marrujo has found out what kind of team this one can be.

In the Tigers' 34-0 win over Central High of El Centro Saturday, Marrujo said he saw the kind of intensity he'd like to have carry over into tomorrow's game at La

It was that kind of intensity, he said, that was missing in Valencia's worst loss of the season -31-3 loss to crosstown rival El Dorado Sept. 25.

Valencia is off to a 2-2 start and after a 38-21 win over Villa Park in the season-opener, a Marrujo-coached team at the school lost two consecutive games for the first time since 1982.

"When you've been coaching a long time it happens. You don't win every week," said Marrujo, whose Valencia teams have a 112-28-4 record since 1981.

Chris Draft, one of the few returning starters from last year's squad, has established himself as the man to stop on the Tigers squad. In the win over Central, Draft rushed for more than 200 yards and scored a pair of touchdowns

Pop Warner has mixed results

North County News

It was a big weekend for the Yorba Linda Pop Warner old-timers last Saturday as each of the organization's four midget and junior midget teams claimed victory

The midget Aztecs improved to 3-1 in impressive fashion, dominating the Long Beach Rams, 25-0. The Aztecs tallied more than 200 yards rushing and passing and scored 22 points in less than three minutes during one span in the first

The midget Panthers also improved to 3-1 by defeating the Fullerton Tigers, 28-7

In junior midget games, the Tigers posted a 21-6 win over the Garden Grove Gators and remained unbeaten at 3-0-1. The Lions (2-2) were 20-6 winners over the Costa Mesa Colts.

The Warriors (2-1-1) played to a 7-7 tie with their junior pee-wee opponent Long Beach Rams.

In a memorable pee-wee contest, the Spartans trailed the host Huntington Beach Chargers, 13-0, late in the fourth quarter before scoring two touchdowns in the final four minutes. Unfortunately, the Spartans missed both extra-point conversions and lost, 13-12.

Orange Empire Conference play continues this weekend for seven of Yorba Linda's nine teams.

I walked most of my neighborhood one recent Sunday morning in order to distribute material for a city council candidate. My job was to place a piece of campaign literature on each front

But have you noticed how many homes in newer developments don't allow people to get near the front door? I was amazed by the number of homes with gated walkways that prevented my placing the campaign literature on the front porch.

It was only then I realized what a significant change has taken place in recent years regarding our homes and our relationships with our neighbors and neighborhoods.

The evolution of garage is to blame. Back in the 1940s, garages were considered eyesores. They were usually well behind the house — unattached. Alleys were added to neighborhoods in order to provide garage access for the family car. There were few driveways.

In the early 1950s, as garages were used more often, architects determined that it made sense to locate the garage at the side of the home, and to add a driveway from the street. Later in the decade, the garage was actually attached to the house.

Patrick Veling's PROPERTY LINES

It wasn't until the late 1960s, however, that a door was added that allowed direct access from the house to the garage. In today's security-conscious world, most real estate professionals will tell you that garage access - the ability to close the garage door and enter the house directly — is a major selling benefit.

Since the 1970s, land costs have skyrocketed and the garage has become more critical than ever to homeowners. The result is that newer homes don't just feature a garage — they are built around the garage. And the garage access door gets a great deal more use than the front door. Which explains why I find advertising circulars and thrift shop collection bags stuffed into the handle of my garage door.

I seldom use our front door. Smart solicitors know this, and also know I'll see the material on my garage door. I am usually furious about having to leave my car to remove the material. But I can't blame them. Some advertising material has been known to be on my front porch for more than a week at a time, as evidenced by its severe yellow-

All of this means it's getting harder and harder to walk up to your neighbor's front door to borrow his electric drill (the sole reason my next door neighbor installed a gate on his walkway). It also, sadly, is a commentary on the gradual extinction of true, spontaneous neighborhood relationships

When I grew up in Anaheim, the garage door (attached but no direct access) in combination with the front door, was a statement to the neighbor hood of the resident's interest in neighborly intersection.

An open garage door, combined with an open front door and closed screen door, was an open invitation for visita-tion and possibly a beverage. A closed garage door and open front door was a sign that neighborly business needed to be serious. This included the borrowing of a drill or a cup of sugar. A closed garage door and front door meant one of two things: the neighbors weren't home, or they were expecting invited guests and wished not to be disturbed

In some newer neighborhoods it is now a violation of community rules to have one's garage door open unless there is some garage-related activity taking place. It is the residents of these homes who also have gated walkways for whom I feel most sorry

They may not have to lend out their electric drill. But they also have to run to the supermarket when they need a cup of sugar.

Exterminator shouldn't be problem

With winter approaching, many homeowners may face a problem that has existed since the dawn of time: pests.

"No doubt the caveman kept fires burning to stop insects from coming into his dwelling, but fortunately, the modern homeowner has other options," says Jeanne Barnes, president of the North Orange County Association of Realtors. "Insect infestation can cause structural damage to a home, resulting in a loss of value. Letting professionals deal with a pest problem can give you peace of mind as well as ensure safe treatment of your home and its occupants.

"Extermination services will vary from company to company, so it's important to choose carefully," says Barnes. The North Orange County Association of Realtors recommends the following guidelines for choosing a professional exterminator: ■ If you don't have referrals from friends or neighbors, contact the Better Business Bureau, the Environmental Protection Agency Office for Pesticides, or a local consumer advocate office for recommendations. Select several companies and contact each for some basic information.

■ Ask each if they will provide the names of previous customers whom you may call for references. If they won't supply this information, look elsewhere.

Is the company's license current? When was it last renewed, and what criteria was met for relicensing?

■ Inquire about each company's insurance policy. Contractors' general liability insurance, including coverage for sudden and accidental pollution, offers you protection should there be an accident during pesticide application. Workers compensation insurance can protect you if an employee of the company is hurt while working in your home.

"At this point, you should be able to narrow your list to two or three companies that meet initial standards," says Barnes. "You're now ready to get to the nitty-gritty of hiring an exterminator."

Have each potential exterminator survey your home to offer a written, detailed statement noting the extent of infestation and the specific measures necessary to solve the problem. Each company should explain what pesticides will be used, and what hazards, if any, are associated with the pesticide. Will you need to vacate your home for any length of time? Are pets or small children endangered? What precautions should be taken before, during, or after the application?

Will pesticide be applied outside the home? If so, are shrubbery, grass, or other plants at risk? Should adjacent neighbors be advised of the application?

Is the application a one-time process, or will you need service on a regular basis? Also ask for a written guarantee. One-time applications should be accompanied by at least a 30-day guarantee.

Finally, compare prices. Don't automatically choose the least expensive company; make sure you're basing your decision on comparable services.

"Be an informed consumer and know what you can expect from an exterminating service," advises Barnes. "Ridding your home of pests may be your first priority, but for satisfying results, and to maintain the value of your home, take time to choose a service wisely."

The North Orange County Association of Realtors is one of 11 such organizations in Orange County and is the Voice for Real Estate serving: Brea, Fullerton, La Habra, La Habra Heights, Placentia and Yorba Linda.

Vicki Sayler, Mari Gilbert and Valerie Shubert sort through donations for the sale.

Malbrue earns stripes as the Tarbell Tiger

Servite running back Elphamous Malbrue III is a tiger on the football field but a pussycat in his home community of Anaheim Hills

After scoring two touchdowns and running 145 yards on Friday, Sept. 18 against Valencia, (Servite defeated Valencia 14-0), Malbrue went home, got about five hours of sleep and at 7 a.m. the next morning he transformed into the Tarbell Tiger for the Tarbell Realtors Anaheim Hills office, located at 6396 Santa Ana Canyon Road, where his mother, Sincee' Callahan, is a realtor.

Tarbell gave away balloons at the community pancake breakfast held in the parking lot of the Anaheim Hills office. Malbrue entertained young children and handed out Tarbell balloons. Cheryl Heisler, manager of the office, said lots of people came out for the breakfast. She and other agents said that they were impressed with Malbrue's endurance and dedication to do a good job. The children loved him, said Cheryl, and when he left the breakfast for a 10:30 a.m. football review, all the children missed him.

Malbrue has been elected Tarbell Tiger and will participate in other Tarbell community service ventures. Look forward to Tarbell Tiger on Oct. 17 between 8 - 10 a.m. at the Tarbell pumpkin patch and boutique, at the intersection of Fairmont and Santa Ana Canyon Road, Anaheim

Sayler, Prudential ready for festival

Vicki Salyer, Mari Gilbert and Valerie Shubert, along with their associates at The Prudential California Realty in Anaheim Hills, are busy preparing for their annual Holiday Harvest Festival. The festival consists of a craft boutique, a petting zoo for the children, a "recycle" garage sale, and a bake sale.

The annual event is sponsored by The Prudential California Realty in Anaheim Hills and the merchants of the El Rancho Shopping Center to raise funds to help feed the needy families of Orange County.

The Harvest Festival will be held on Saturday, Oct. 17 at the El Rancho Shopping Center located at the corner of Santa Ana Canyon Road and Fairmont Boulevard in Anaheim Hills. The "recycle" sale starts at 7 a.m. and the craft boutique, bake sale and petting zoo opens at 9

"We have over 40 crafters who have already reserved spaces for the boutique with an enormous variety of merchandise. We have also received numerous donations for the recycle sale — but we can definitely use more," Salyer said. She also states that the sponsors are anticipating a very successful event.

If you are a crafter or have merchandise or services you would like to sell at the Holiday Harvest Festival, contact Salyer at 998-7250. Space reservation will be made with a $10 donation. Also, if you have any "used usables" you would like to donate, free pick-up can be arranged by contacting Salyer.

We already have some terrific items, lots of furniture and clothing. There will be something for everyone and plenty of good food too," Salyer said.

For more information on the festival, call Salyer at The Prudential California Realty at 998-7250.

Elphamous Malbrue makes appearance as the Tarbell Tiger.
